Interested in Astronomy? SPACED (the Society for Physics, Astronomy, Cosmology and Experimental Deeds) is organising a trip to the Astronomical Society of South Australia’s Stockport Observatory (just north of Gawler). While there, you’ll have the chance to use some of the most sophisticated astronomical equipment in South Australia, as well as have the chance to talk to experienced professional and amateur astronomers. View the skies through the eyepiece, or have the constellations pointed out to you as you crank your head up towards the wide blue yonder and beyond. SPACED will be providing transportation in the form of a coach, which will leave the University Grounds at 6:30 pm sharp, and return to the campus no later than 11:30 pm.

Cost for non-SPACED members is $5, which will cover the coach fare and the admission to the Observatory. Places are very limited, so if you’re interested, HURRY!!!!
